

Environmental Policy

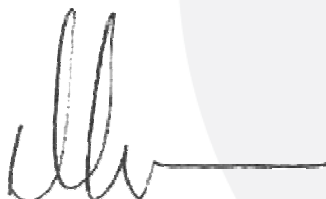

Veolia Environmental Services (“Veolia”) is committed to the protection of the natural environment, the prevention of pollution, and continual improvement in our environmental performance. This commitment is recognised not only as intrinsic to the success of the business, but also in satisfying the expectations of all of Veolia’s stakeholders, including the broader community.

To deliver on this commitment, Veolia will seek to accomplish the following objectives:

- Conduct all activities in an environmentally responsible and competent manner;
- Comply with all applicable environmental legislation, regulation and other requirements related to the environmental aspects of Veolia’s activities and services;
- Establish and periodically review environmental objectives and targets, with the aim of continually improving Veolia’s environmental performance;
- Identify the existing and potential environmental impacts of Veolia’s activities, and implement measures to avoid, reduce or control these impacts;
- Develop a sense of environmental responsibility within all employees and seek to extend this attitude into the community;
- Build and sustain alliances with government, policy makers and industry, in an effort to advance well consulted, clear and united environmental objectives for the benefit of the wider community;
- Liaise with suppliers, sub-contractors and clients, to achieve a high level of environmental performance.

Every employee and sub-contractor of Veolia is responsible for adhering to this policy and the collective environmental objectives. We recognise that contributing to a healthy environment is in the best interests of Veolia’s employees, clients, the broader community and the long-term sustainability of Veolia.

This Policy should be read in conjunction with the Veolia Sustainable Development Policy.

Doug Dean
Managing Director